On Monday and Tuesday evenings from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., the public is invited to view the designs and give feedback. The designers will use public input to refine and enhance designs and will share the recommended versions on Wednesday, July 10 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. The team working on the plan will use the results of the design charrettes to prepare the final plan and present the information to the Coeur d'Alene City Council and ignite cda Board of Commissioners in August. The City Council will use the master plan and feasibility study to determine if an Urban Renewal District will be created for the Health Corridor study area.
